Forecast for Saturday 06 Feb 2021

Weather: Cloudy with spells of rain or sleet this morning, although snow over Kinder Scout and higher summits. Further spells of sleet and snow this afternoon, the snow falling increasingly to low levels this afternoon, with snow at all levels this evening. The snow will become heavy at times, which combined with strengthening winds are likely to generate blizzard conditions over the tops. Any drier and brighter interludes reserved for the west this morning, but will be rare.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: Around 30% across western areas this morning, decreasing near zero this afternoon and evening across the whole Peak District.

Visibility: Lengthy periods of cloud down to 500m, but 300 m at times across eastern areas. Good visibility away from cloud, but falling to a few kilometres or less in with rain, sleet or snow and near nil in blizzards.
